

The Association of

Police Communicators

Welcome to APComm

Your professional communications network

What is APComm?

APComm is the Association of Police Communicators and is open to all members of communications teams involved in operational policing. As long as your force, OPCC or policing organisation is a member, then you are too.

How does it work?

An elected Executive Committee run the association on behalf of members.

Where can I find out more?

Contact any of the executive members (details below) and follow us on Twitter @APCOMM999

What does APComm do

APComm is the voice for police communications on a national level and represents the interests of all members. It is committed to professional development and offers:

- Quarterly national meetings with updates on national issues and trends, and the opportunity to influence the national direction of police communications
- Formal and informal networking with colleagues from across the country
- Professional development in the form of training courses, workshops and seminars with many being free for members
- Access to training courses provided by other organisations
- National annual academy subsidised for members
- Monthly newsletter with information, news and opportunities
- Mentoring and coaching scheme
- Provide networking, well-being support and shared learning opportunities for members
